Moreover, using your fifth option, file an action in the superior court which may be the most significant. Quite often, lawyers will use the small claims court to settle the matter at hand or to determine if there is even a valid case worth taking to a jury for the larger case. Even if they were to try this case, since it would be smaller in size, they would have to pay more for court costs and attorney's fees. Thus, this would be the final option you should consider. You will have to keep all the lawyers and courts costs in mind before filing the case. It is much easier to pay the $977.00 fee for that case, rather than spend thousands of dollars trying to get everything filed correctly, only to have the judge throw it out. Remember, if you don't have the money to fund your action, you'll be required to pay for the court costs, and the filing fee, as well as any other fees you incur. Don't forget to learn from your mistakes Taking the time to learn from your mistakes is crucial in any business or job. Mistakes happen. However, just because you made a mistake once, it does not mean you are bound to make it again. Take the time to read over the entire complaint and understand it completely. Write down all the sections of the complaint so that you can refer back to them later. Some mistakes that people have made are simply a typographical error. Therefore, a quick online search on your mistake could very well be what you need to help you find the correct information. Once you have this information, go back and reread the complaint. Hopefully, it is now correct. Be sure to have your court date in mind because mistakes are generally easier to fix the closer you are to your court date. Make sure that the information is correct, and if there is anything that you are unsure about, go back to the original complaint and see if you are right. The more information you have, the better able you will be to argue your case in court. Practice makes perfect 82157476af
